NEEDLENOSE LURE

The Needlenose was originally developed by Lance Butler in timber to enable the design to be fine-tuned prior to market release. The lure accounted for many trophy fish during the development phase and the production model has consistently outperformed the original prototypes. Lance wanted a lure that was sturdy in construction and incorporated some cutting edge features not found in other hard body lures. The Needlenose features are:

Through Wire Tow Point and Hook Hangers for superior strength. The Killalure interchangeable Rattle Chamber technology, Dynamic Interchange System (DIS), to give the Needlenose a loud rattle, single ball rattle or be silent on demand. A bib giving the lure a "crash dive" ability when casting to structure incorporating the H2O Hydrokeel giving added stability when Trolling or Retrieving.

The lure is drawn from the body which extends over the bib. This gives increased strength and creates a tight action which is maintained at all speeds. The body shape and weighting ensures a bullet like Casting ability.
